will present the article

The Future of Work with AI: Human-AI Collaboration

Summary:

Generative AI has fundamentally changed the way people work. Not only has it changed the way computer scientists work, but it has also changed how the entire design, development, and business life cycles work. And although AI is powerful, there are still critical roles for humans to work in collaboration with AI - each doing what the other cannot do. We will introduce two new paradigms for how business processes, project management, team coordination, and cross-functional teams will work in a future powered by generative AI and AI agents.

We look forward to welcoming you at the seminar.
